1/5 Training AI to detect checkboxes seems simple: just get your model to translate a binary input (is the box checked or unchecked) into a boolean value (true/false). 🧵

Reducto @reductoai

2/5 The reality is far more deceptive. Inputs can be fuzzy – is that pencil mark lightly shaded or lazily erased? Is that box marked or did ink bleed through from the other side of the form? Digital forms have similar pitfalls, either from poorly designed hitboxes or lagged taps on touchscreens.

Reducto @reductoai

3/5 Then there's validation. Checkboxes lack the context that humans in the loop need to infer meaning. While a typo can be flagged by its surrounding letters, checkmarks don't have spellcheck.

Reducto @reductoai

4/5 Thankfully, checkboxes are low-stakes data. Oh wait. A misattributed checkbox can violate privacy, neglect a life-threatening allergy, and create thorny liabilities.

Reducto @reductoai

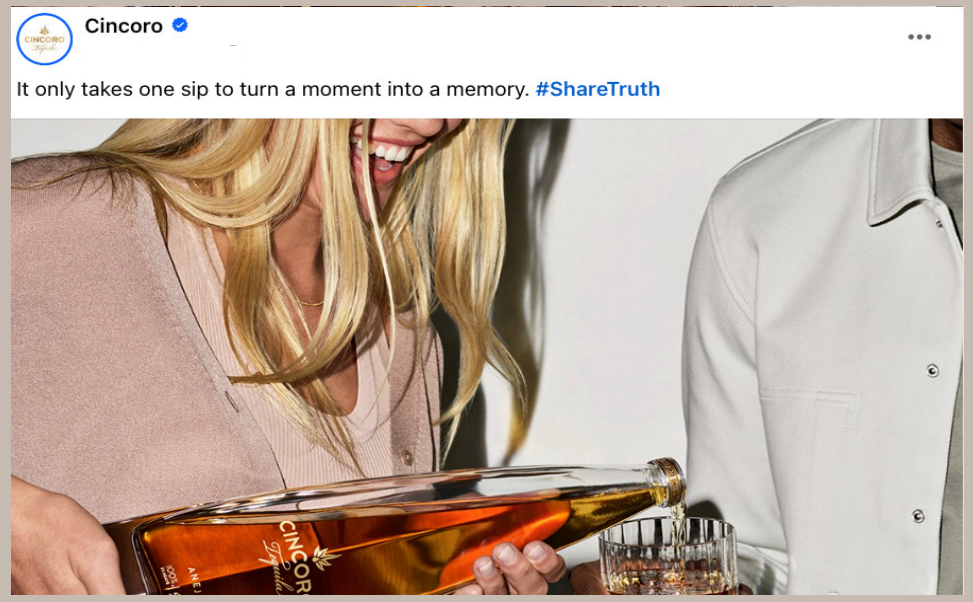

5/5 Reducto turns the checkboxes you have into the data you need.

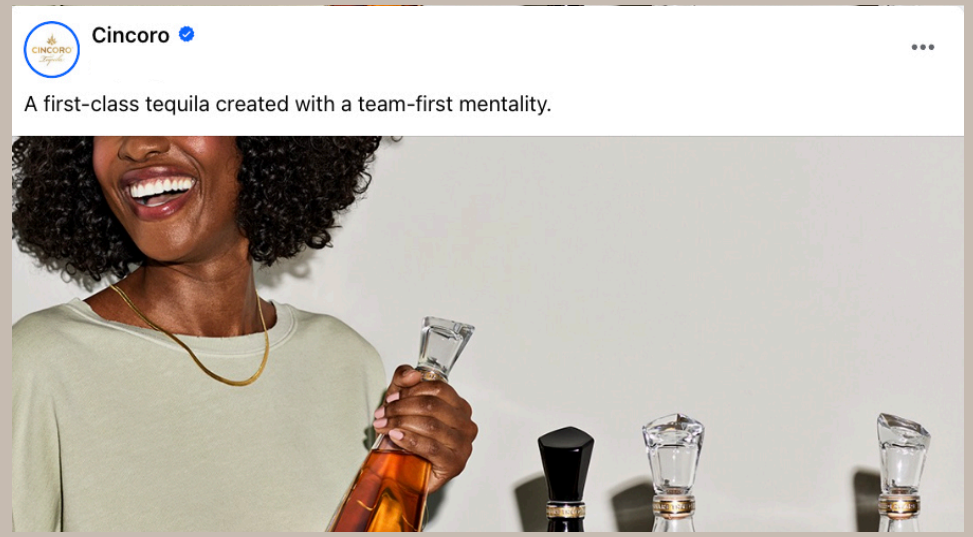

one small checkmark in documents = one giant benchmark in document processing
